

NEW LOBBIES & WAITING ROOMS

29D

30C

30B

29C

30A

29B

© Law Ling Kit, Virginia Lung

RESIDENTIAL LOBBY IN SHENZHEN

ONE PLUS PARTNERSHIP

Shenzhen, China | 2007

This lobby, belonging to an apartment building, is inspired by Chinese culture. In this frame, the bamboo plant, present in the majority of the architectural manifestations of the country, has been selected as the spinal cord for the design of this space.

Bamboo is a metaphor for strength and flexibility. It is the theme of many songs, poems, and paintings since the beginning of time, as well as a household item in the traditional agricultural sector.

Its linear shape inspires the design of this residential lobby, where the color green predominates and is intensified by special lighting. On the circular section, two central elements have been created for the residents' daily enjoyment; the fan-shaped mailboxes and a glass sculpture simulating a labyrinth.

The fan-shape of the residents' mailboxes is in itself a sculptural element.

Bamboo, with its linear and flexible characteristics, inspires the design of this lobby.

